Orinoco Research launches Caracas Investment Week 2027

Orinoco Research is organising a second investor trip to Venezuela on March 1–5, 2027, following the success of Caracas Investment Week 2026.

The first 2027 edition will take a multi-sector approach to Venezuela's growth story, covering energy, debt restructuring, critical minerals, economic and political reforms, agribusiness, real estate and tourism, and U.S.-Venezuela relations.

The trip offers direct access to decision-makers, exclusive market insights, high-level networking opportunities, and on-the-ground experience.

As in our last trip, activities range from panel and Q&A sessions in a conference room to external visits to the headquarters of public and private sector organisations.

The agenda is full of opportunities to network and discover more of Venezuela, with two days of panels and meetings in Caracas, a site visit to a field in the Orinoco Oil Belt, and a stay at Los Roques Archipelago.

The event builds on the success of our first Caracas Investment Week in April 2026. It brought together C-level executives and investors from hedge funds, family offices, and oil and mining firms, from countries including the United States, the United Kingdom, Argentina, France, Canada, and Brazil.

Investors were able to meet with Economic Vice President Calixto Ortega, Minister of Finance Anabel Pereira, Central Bank President Luis Pérez, and Deputy Minister of Finance Christiam Hernández. The group also held a joint call with Acting President Delcy Rodríguez.
